

Lojack[®] Your Laptops

Did you know that over 2 million laptops are stolen every year? For a facility director, this could mean the loss and compromise of financial data and other important information. A stolen laptop can end up costing considerably more than the price of a new computer, if it results in a tarnished reputation or law suit. Not to mention the increased vulnerability to identity theft.

To help with these unfortunate situations, software is now available to track the location of your computer when it is connected to the Internet. One such software manufacturer, Lojack (www.lojackforlaptops.com), even has a recovery team. For around $40, this software might save you a lot more than the cost of your computer.